

squadron has rearranged the club's moorings. The various boats are now in comparatively good order at the anchorage, which lies immediately in front of the squadron's sheds on the Birkenhead side of the Port Adelaide River.

Death of Mr. E. F. Belt.

By the recent death of Mr. E. F. Belt, the Royal South Australian Yacht Squadron has lost a genuine member who did his best for the advancement of the pastime of cruising. The late Mr. Belt at one time owned the Alexa. He recently had an auxiliary schooner built by B. Weir, Birkenhead. This craft has only just been finished. Death called Mr. Belt away before he had had an opportunity to bend her sails. He had, however, tried the engine with which she had been fitted.
